Dear Mr. Lederberg:

Your article on Mace was carried in the Minneapolis Sunday Tribune on April 14.

I have a case involving personal injury on account of the misuse of Mace and am therefore especially interested in what you have reported.

I am wondering if you can supply me with any references that you may have in your possession on the subject and also give me the address of Dr. Lawrence Rose of San Francisco whom you mention in the article.

Very truly yours,

William A. Lindquist

I wish I could find some! I find almost nothing but anecdotes. However, Dr. Rose's address is enclosed. I am also enclosing a couple of leads that might be helpful to you. You are undoubtedly already in touch with pharmacologists at the U of Minn. If I find anything more, I will pass on to you; and will be grateful for reciprocity.

Sincerely,

Prof. Joshua Lederberg

P.S. The "proprietary solvent" may be as important as the chloroacetophenone. Some preparations may include DMSO as well as trichloroethane, but this is mere rumor.
